Common Misconceptions About Calling 811

At least a few days before you dig on your property, you must call 811 to get underground utility lines marked. This helps prevent unintended consequences such as injuries, damage to your property, utility service outages to the neighborhood, and potential fines and repair costs.

Some homeowners, however, are confused about when they need to call 811. So we're clearing up some common misconceptions here:

"It's just a small project. I don't need to call." Wrong! Every digging job requires a call—even "small" projects like planting trees and shrubs. Some utility lines are buried just a few inches underground.

"I am digging in a spot that was previously marked." You still need to call. Erosion and root system growth can alter the depth or location of buried lines, or your utility companies may have completed work on their lines since the last time you dug.

"I assume my contractor or landscaper will call." Don't assume. Check with the company before digging begins to make sure a call to 811 has been placed.

Woodstock Communications thanks you for helping prevent damage to our infrastructure.

To Reduce Bullying, Kids are Urged to be "Upstanders"

STOMP Out Bullying™ is the leading national bullying and cyberbullying prevention organization for kids in the U.S. One of its goals is to teach effective solutions on how bystanders can best respond when they witness bullying.

Bystanders often don't know what to do, or they're afraid of retaliation, so they do and say nothing. STOMP Out Bullying wants to emphasize that when bystanders do nothing, they send a message to the bully that their behavior is acceptable.

Instead of just being a bystander, kids are encouraged to stand up and be an "upstander." This includes doing the following:

- Don't laugh.
- Don't encourage the bully.
- Reach out in friendship to the victim.
- If you notice someone being isolated from others, invite them to join you.
- Tell an adult.

There is strength in numbers. After all, every school and every community has many more caring kids than bullies.
